

ATME Fee Schedule

1. Token Issuance fees

ATME supports the token issuance process by acting as a Digital Token advisor for Digital Token issuers. Digital Token issuers are required to enter into a digital token advisory agreement with ATME for related advisory and issuance services. Each agreement specifies ATME's fees for the specific issuance. ATME's standard issuance fees are:

Fee type	Fee (% of issuance volume)	Min fee (BHD)
Token issuance fee	0.50 %	15 000
Industrial metal token issuance fee	-	10 000

2. Listing fees

Fee type	First year (BHD)	Annual fee (BHD) (starting from 2nd year)
Secondary market listing fee	10 000	5 000

3. Trading fees

ATME Platform charges trading fees from both participating parties (buyer, seller) on a secondary market, and charges token buyers on a primary market.

Fee type	Fee (% of traded volume)	Min fee
Secondary market trading fee	0.10%	either 1 BHD or 1 in the currency used for fee payment
Primary market trading fee*	0.10%

*The standard primary market trading fee applies except as otherwise stated in the Whitepaper

4. Redemption fees

Token holders may request token redemption for asset backed tokens and money market tokens. In case of receiving a redemption request, ATME will issue an invoice to investors, that is payable via bank transfer only. The redemption fee value will be communicated by ATME at the time of a redemption request and may differ depending on the delivery terms (for asset backed tokens), and depending on the currency and intermediary bank fees (for money market tokens).

5. Administration fees

ATME does not charge token holders for storing tokens, as customers store tokens on their wallet in a self custody mode.

ATME arranges and administers custody for asset backed tokens against an administration fee, in accordance with the Whitepaper published by the Digital Token issuer prior to the token distribution. ATME's administration fee accrues on a daily basis and is invoiced at the end of each month. Customers must pay incoming invoices within 10 days.

ATME provides customers with a monthly fee report together with its invoice, that can be paid both on and off platform.
